COMFORT RATING

Thermal factors such as air temp, radiant temp, air velocity, and humidity all contribute to our thermal comfort. Stubbornly, Mother Nature refuses us the ability to control these thermal factors.

Personal factors such as the type of clothing we wear and the activity levels we perform at, are two elements of thermal comfort we can control. Additional variables that affect comfort are circulation in the feet, presence of moisture, body temp, wind chill and sock quality.

Thermal factors such as air temp, radiant temp, air velocity, and humidity all contribute to our thermal comfort. Sublimity, Mother Nature refuses us the ability to control these thermal factors.

Personal factors such as the type of clothing we wear and the activity levels we perform at, are two elements of thermal comfort we can control. Additional variables that effect comfort are circulation in the feet, presence of moisture, body temp, wind chill and sock quality.
